SURPRISE EXPRESSIONS

In today's English lesson, you will learn English native expressions to say, 'I'm surprised'. We are surprised by the events that occur in our daily life, instead of saying the boring phrase 'I'm surprised'. Learn some alternative English expressions that would make you sound fluent in English.

These English phrases could be used in different situations and you don't have to use the same old English phrase and sound boring. Practice these English phrases in your daily English conversation as a surprise comes your way.

EXERCISE 01: Practice the expressions you saw in the video. Take advantage of your virtual class to do it

ADVICE AND SUGGESTIONS

Sometimes other people don't know what to do and they ask us for some advice. Here are ten phrases you can use when you are making suggestions.

1. I reckon you should stop now.
2. Why don't you stop now?
3. How about stopping now?
4. If I were you, I'd stop now.

Phrases 1, 2, 3 and 4 are quite informal. Phrases 2 and 3 are more tentative (you are trying not to be forceful with your ideas).

Phrase 4 is more forceful than the first three suggestion phrases.

5. I suggest you stop now.

Phrase 5 is neutral and can be used formally and informally. Using more stress on 'gest' of 'suggest' makes it more tentative and more stress on the main verb makes it more forceful.

6. You'd (really) better stop right now.

Phrase 6 is quite forceful and gives the idea that not following the advice will have a negative result.

7. I would strongly advise you to stop.

8. My advice would be to stop now.

Phrases 7 and 8 are quite formal in tone. Phrase 7 is really quite forceful and phrase 8 less forceful.

9. It might be a good idea to stop.

10. You might try stopping.

Phrases 9 and 10 are the most tentative phrases (least forceful). Phrase 10 sounds more informal than phrase 9.

EXERCISE 02: Practice the expressions with your classmates.

ASKING ABOUT HEALTH/LIFE

When we meet somebody, we know it's polite to ask a question or two about their health and their life. There are many different phrases in English for doing this. Here are ten of them.

1. How are you?

Phrase 1 is the best-known phrase but English people don't use it every time so it's useful to learn some of the others on this page.

2. How are things?

Phrase 2 is a general inquiry about the other person's health and life. Your answer could be about your health, your work or your personal life.

3. How's things?

Phrase 3 is similar to phrase 2 but the 'incorrect' grammar makes it much more informal.

4. How's it going?

5. How are you getting on?

Phrases 4 and 5 are asking about the other person's life (work or personal life).

6. How have you been?

Phrase 6 is really asking about health, but the other person may answer with general information about their life.

7. What have you been (getting) up to?

Phrase 7 is really asking about what kind of activities the other person has been doing recently. It more often refers to their home life, not work.

8. I hope everything is okay?

9. Alright?

Phrases 8 and 9 are asking about health and life with a yes / no question. Phrase 9 is much more informal than phrase 8.

10. How have you been keeping?

Phrase 10 is more formal but still sincere and friendly and is asking about the other person's health.

EXERCISE 03: Practice the expressions with your classmates.

APOLOGISING

Everybody makes mistakes sometimes. When it happens, we need a phrase to tell the other person how really sorry we are and stop them getting really angry. Here are ten phrases.

1. Sorry.

Phrase 1 is a general short apology. We use this when we bump into people on the street. At other times, it sounds too weak.

2. I'm (so / very / terribly) sorry.

In phrase 2, we use 'so', 'very' and 'terribly' to make the meaning stronger. 'Terribly' is the strongest. If we use one of the words in brackets, it is stressed.

3. Ever so sorry.

Phrase 3 is quite formal but it's a stronger apology than just 'sorry'.

4. How stupid / careless / thoughtless of me.

We use phrase 4 to criticise ourselves and the mistake that we have just made.

5. Pardon (me)6. That's my fault.7. Sorry. It was all my fault.

We use phrases 6 and 7 to take all the responsibility for what happened. Phrase 7 is a little stronger.

8. Please excuse my (ignorance)

We use phrase 8 to apologise for our lack of knowledge or ability. We can replace the word in brackets with other nouns, e.g. carelessness, forgetfulness.

9. Please don't be mad at me.

Phrase 9 is asking the other person not to get angry. The tone is quite informal.

10. Please accept our (sincerest) apologies.

Phrase 10 is often used in formal letters. The word 'sincerest' makes the apology very strong and very formal.

EXERCISE 04: Practice the expressions with your classmates.HOW TO USE SAY, TELL, SPEAK AND TALK*SAY, TELL, SPEAK OR TALK – WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

Say, tell, speak and talk are four very similar words that can be difficult to use correctly in English! Mistakes are common when there are no exact equivalents in your native language, or when rules on usage differ. Let's look at the differences between say, tell, speak and talk by explaining how each word is used separately.

HOW TO USE SAY

I say – He/She/It says – We/They say
I will say – I am saying – I said – I have said

When we use 'say', we do not use an object (e.g. me/them/you) immediately after the verb. The verb 'say' is used when we quote people directly and when we give instructions.

For example:

- 'Amelia said she would be back soon.'
- 'The weatherman said it would rain today.'
- 'I won't say this again! – Will you please get ready for school now?'

Say can also be used to express an opinion or thought, as in: 'I say we should give each person twenty tickets each to sell.'

HOW TO USE TELL

I tell – She/He/It tells – They/We tell
I will tell – I am telling – I told – I have told

When we use 'tell', we also include the object (e.g. you/her/us) immediately after the verb. The verb 'tell' is used when we say something to someone and is commonly used when giving an order or instruction.

For example:

- 'I told my son to brush his teeth.'
- 'The teacher told the class to do their homework.'
- 'You forgot to tell me to bring my swimming costume!'

Sometimes 'say' and 'tell' can be used interchangeably to express the same meaning when information is being passed from one person to another. In this case, the construction would be: 'tell' + object or 'say' + 'to' + object.

For example:

- 'Laura told me that she would be late for work.'
- 'Laura said to me that she would be late for work.'

HOT TIP!

Learners of English often make mistakes like 'He said me...' or 'She said me that...'. This is incorrect. Remember to include 'to' between 'said' and the object! Just as you would 'send a letter TO someone', you would also 'say something TO someone'. The preposition 'to' shows the direction in which the information is going.

EXERCISE 05: Say or tell? – Choose the correct answer

- 1 Can you me the way to the station, please?
- 2 He didn't a word.
- 3 She her name was Sue.
- 4 Let me you something about my hobbies.
- 5 Forget everything I just .
- 6 Why didn't you him that before?
- 7 Why didn't you that before?
- 8 They nothing to me.
- 9 You don't need to us that.
- 10 What did Eric when he saw the new bike?

HOW TO USE SPEAK

I speak – She/He/It speaks – They/We speak
I will speak – I am speaking – I spoke – I have spoken

We use the verb 'speak' (instead of 'talk') when we are in a more formal situation and wish to emphasise that something is important. When 'speak' is used as a noun (speech) it also takes on a more formal tone that when we use 'talk' – i.e. 'Give a speech' is more formal than 'give a talk'.

For example:

- 'We need to speak about your attendance this term!' (stricter than 'talk about')
- 'John will be speaking at an international conference next month.' (more prestigious than 'give a talk on...')

We can also use 'speak' to describe verbal fluency or knowledge of languages, as in: 'He speaks three languages fluently – German, French and Spanish.'. In this context, 'speak' simply means that the person knows the languages. It doesn't only refer to spoken ability.

HOW TO USE TALK

I talk – She/He/It talks – They/We talk
I will talk – I am talking – I talked – I have talked

We use the verb 'talk' when we are in a more relaxed setting or when we are among friends in a conversational situation. You can think of 'talk' as a slightly more formal word for 'chat'.

For example:

- 'Sorry, who were you talking to before I interrupted?'
- 'I was talking with my mum the other day and we decided that...'
- 'I love chatting with my mates (friends) over a cuppa (cup of tea)!' (very informal)

Often 'speak' and 'talk' can be used interchangeably to give the same meaning and there is no need to change the grammar of the sentence.

For example:

- 'I will speak/talk with you about this more on Monday.'
- 'We can speak/talk about the new project next week.'

PRACTICE THE FOLLOWING VOCABULARY

HELPING VERBS/AUXILIARY VERBS

Helping verbs or auxiliary verbs such as will, shall, may, might, can, could, must, ought to, should, would, used to, need are used in conjunction with main verbs to express shades of time and mood. The combination of helping verbs with main verbs creates what are called verb phrases or verb strings. In the following sentence, "will have been" are helping or auxiliary verbs and "studying" is the main verb; the whole verb string is underlined:

- As of next August, I will have been studying chemistry for ten years.

Students should remember that adverbs and contracted forms are not, technically, part of the verb. In the sentence, "He has already started." the adverb already modifies the verb, but it is not really part of the verb. The same is true of the 'nt in "He hasn't started yet" (the adverb not, represented by the contracted n't, is not part of the verb, has started).

Shall, will and forms of have, do and be combine with main verbs to indicate time and voice. As auxiliaries, the verbs be, have and do can change form to indicate changes in subject and time.

- I shall go now.
- He had won the election.
- They did write that novel together.
- I am going now.
- He was winning the election.
- They have been writing that novel for a long time.

USES OF SHALL AND WILL AND SHOULD

In England, shall is used to express the simple future for first person I and we, as in "Shall we meet by the river?" Will would be used in the simple future for all other persons. Using will in the first person would express determination on the part of the speaker, as in "We will finish this project by tonight, by golly!" Using shall in second and third persons would indicate promise about the subject, as in "This shall be revealed to you in good time." This usage is certainly acceptable in the U.S., although shall is used far less frequently. The distinction between the two is often obscured by the contraction 'll, which is the same for both verbs.

In the United States, we seldom use shall for anything other than polite questions (suggesting an element of permission) in the first-person:

- "Shall we go now?"
- "Shall I call a doctor for you?"

(In the second sentence, many writers would use should instead, although should is somewhat more tentative than shall.) In the U.S., to express the future tense, the verb will is used in all other cases.

Shall is often used in formal situations (legal or legalistic documents, minutes to meetings, etc.) to express obligation, even with third person and second-person constructions:

- The board of directors shall be responsible for payment to stockholders.
- The college president shall report financial shortfalls to the executive director each semester."

Should is usually replaced, nowadays, by would. It is still used, however, to mean "ought to" as in

- You really shouldn't do that.
- If you think that was amazing, you should have seen it last night.

In British English and very formal American English, one is apt to hear or read should with the first-person pronouns in expressions of liking such as "I should prefer iced tea" and in tentative expressions of opinion such as

- I should imagine they'll vote Conservative.
- I should have thought so.

USES OF DO, DOES AND DID

In the simple present tense, "do" will function as an auxiliary to express the negative and to ask questions. (Does, however, is substituted for third-person, singular subjects in the present tense. The past tense did works with all persons, singular and plural.)

- I don't study at night.
- She doesn't work here anymore.
- Do you attend this school?
- Does he work here?

These verbs also work as "short answers," with the main verb omitted.

- Does she work here? No, she doesn't ~~work here~~.

With "yes-no" questions, the form of do goes in front of the subject and the main verb comes after the subject:

- Did your grandmother know Truman?
- Do wildflowers grow in your back yard?

Forms of do are useful in expressing similarity and differences in conjunction with so and neither.

- My wife hates spinach and so does my son.
- My wife doesn't like spinach; neither do I.

Do is also helpful because it means you don't have to repeat the verb:

- Larry excelled in language studies; so did his brother.
- Raoul studies as hard as his sister does.

The so-called emphatic do has many uses in English.

- To add emphasis to an entire sentence: "He does like spinach. He really does!"

- b. To add emphasis to an imperative: "Do come in." (actually softens the command)
- c. To add emphasis to a frequency adverb: "He never did understand his father." "She always does manage to hurt her mother's feelings."
- d. To contradict a negative statement: "You didn't do your homework, did you?" "Oh, but I did finish it."
- e. To ask a clarifying question about a previous negative statement: "Ridwell didn't take the tools." "Then who did take the tools?"
- f. To indicate a strong concession: "Although the Clintons denied any wrong-doing, they did return some of the gifts."

In the absence of other modal auxiliaries, a form of do is used in question and negative constructions known as the get passive:

- Did Rinaldo get selected by the committee?
- The audience didn't get riled up by the politician.

WOULD

Would is an auxiliary verb - a modal auxiliary verb. We use would mainly to:

- talk about the past
- talk about the future in the past
- express the conditional mood

We also use would for other functions, such as:

- expressing desire, polite requests and questions, opinion, or hope, wish and regret

Structure of would

The basic structure for would is:

subject	+	auxiliary verb would	+	main verb
----------------	---	-----------------------------	---	------------------

Note that:

- The auxiliary verb would is invariable. There is only one form: would
- The main verb is usually in the base form (He would go).

Look at the basic structure again, with positive, negative and question sentences:

	subject	Auxiliary would	not	main verb base
+	I	would		like	tea.
-	She	would	not	go.
?	Would	you		help?

Note that the main verb is sometimes in the form:

- have + past participle (He would have gone)
- be + -ing (He would be going)

The main verb cannot be the to-infinitive. We cannot say: ~~He would to like coffee.~~

Be careful! Note that would and had have the same short form 'd':

He'd finished = He had finished

He'd like coffee = He would like coffee

USE OF WOULD

Would for the past

We often use would as a kind of past tense of will or going to:

- Even as a boy, he knew that he would succeed in life.
- I thought it would rain so I brought my umbrella.

Using would as a kind of past tense of will or going to is common in reported speech:

- She said that she would buy some eggs. ("I will buy some eggs.")
- The candidate said that he wouldn't increase taxes. ("I won't increase taxes.")
- Why didn't you bring your umbrella? I told you it would rain! ("It's going to rain.")

We often use would not to talk about past refusals:

- He wanted a divorce but his wife would not agree.
- Yesterday morning, the car wouldn't start.

We sometimes use would (rather like used to) when talking about habitual past behaviour:

- Every weekday my father would come home from work at 6pm and watch TV.
- Every summer we'd go to the seaside.
- Sometimes she'd phone me in the middle of the night.
- We would always argue. We could never agree.

Would for the future in past

When talking about the past we can use would to express something that has not happened at the time we are talking about:

- In London she met the man that she would one day marry.
- He left 5 minutes late, unaware that the delay would save his life.

Would for conditionals

We often use would express the so-called second and third conditionals:

- If he lost his job, he would have no money.
- If I had won, the lottery I would have bought a car.

Using the same conditional structure, we often use would when giving advice:

- I wouldn't eat that if I were you.
- If I were in your place I would refuse.
- If you asked me, I would say you should go.

Sometimes the condition is "understood" and there does not have to be an "if" clause:

- Someone who liked John would probably love John's father. (If someone liked John, they would probably love John's father.)
- You would never know it. (for example: If you met him you would never know that he was rich.)
- Why don't you invite Mary? I'm sure she'd come.

Although there is always a main verb, sometimes it is understood (not stated) as in:

- I would like to stay. | I wish you would. (would stay)
- Do you think he would come? | I'm sure he would. (would come)

- Who would help us? | John would. (would help us)

Would for desire or inclination

- I would love to live here.
- Would you like some coffee?
- What I would really like is some tea.

Would for polite requests and questions

- Would you open the door, please? (more polite than: Open the door, please.)
- Would you go with me? (more polite than: Will you go with me?)
- Would you know the answer? (more polite than: Do you know the answer?)
- What would the capital of Nigeria be? (more polite than: What is the capital of Nigeria?)

Would for opinion or hope

- I would imagine that they'll buy a new one.
- I suppose some people would call it torture.
- I would have to agree.
- I would expect him to come.
- Since you ask me, I'd say the blue one is best.

Would for wish

- I wish you would stay. (I really want you to stay. I hope you will stay.)
- They don't like me. I'm sure they wish I'd resign.

Note that all of these uses of would express distance or remoteness:

- remoteness in time (past time)
- remoteness of possibility or probability
- remoteness between speakers (formality, politeness)

Would for presumption or expectation

- That would be Jo calling. I'll answer it.
- We saw a police helicopter overhead yesterday morning. | Really? They would have been looking for those bank robbers.

Would for uncertainty

- He would seem to be getting better. (less certain than: He seems to be getting better.)
- It would appear that I was wrong. (less certain than: It appears that I was wrong.)

Would for derogatory comment

- They would say that, wouldn't they?
- John said he didn't steal the money. | Well, he would, wouldn't he?

Would that for regret (poetic/rare)

This rare poetic or literary use of would does not have the normal structure:

- Would that it was true! (If only it were true! We wish that it were true!)
- Would that his mother had lived to see him become president.

CHOOSING A SYNONYM

There is a certain skill involved in choosing the most appropriate synonym, as not all are created equal. It is important to consider the connotation of the word because some synonyms can inject a different meaning than the one intended. For example, one synonym of sad is "gloomy" however; this word carries quite a negative connotation. Depending on the circumstance you can use it, but if you just want to say that someone is "down," then another synonym such as "blue" or "unhappy" would be more applicable.

Here is a list of adjectives and their synonyms that are commonly used to describe people.

HOMOPHONES

In your own language you know many words that sound the same but do not mean the same. They are homophones (= "same sound"). In English, too, there are many homophones, and it's important to try to learn and understand them. We use homophones all the time, even in everyday speech. They are also a common source of humour in jokes, and frequently occur in riddles.

These pages explain homophones and give examples with audio, and also list many homophones by level and by type.

What are Homophones?

Homophone (noun): one of two or more words with the same pronunciation but different spellings and/or meanings (for example weak and week)

Homophones are words that have exactly the same sound (pronunciation) but different meanings and (usually) spelling.

Common Homophones List

The following list of 70 homophone pairs contains only the most common homophones, using relatively well-known words. These are headwords only. No inflections (such as third person singular "s" or noun plurals) are included. You can see more homophones in the graded homophones lists above.
